

Hey I'm back 😊

So as I wrote it before in this blog I would like to tell you more about the Belgian atmosphere. People here feel responsible for nature, waste recycling, and human rights. It's a normal thing that they organize protests at least twice a month. I saw many students on the streets protest over climate change. Usually, teachers join them also. In this case, the university sends you a notification that some of your lectures are skipped.

Belgium was the second country legalized gay marriage. You can find rainbow flags everywhere. It's cool that they are so open about it. Same situation at school. Everyone is nice and welcoming, and they don't judge anyone by first sight. That is my experience but I'm pretty sure that I'm right and it's like that. 😊

What annoys me a lot it is waste recycling. :D.. No really! It's hard to understand what they want. I get confused at school or at home when I want to throw my rubbish. They have a different system for plastic and paper. You have to check if the product has a sign or something. If you don't recycle well they fine you!!! Every street has its own day when you can put out the waste, and every waste has its own day also. You can download a schedule which helps you but don't search for English introduction because everything is in Dutch or French. :D

zo	18
ma	19	REST	PAPIER
		GFT	GLAS
di	20

Okay so now I feel like I told you everything that you should know about Belgium/Gent, the student life, and the Erasmus mobility also. It's time to show something!!! ;) See you in my next VLOG. <3