THE PURPOSE OF THE SUBJECT, LEARNING OUTCOMES:

The experiences of the 20th century, the Cold War, the system changes and the new security challenges of the 21st century made the international community necessary to rethink the concept of security. In our quickly changing environment the International Organizations responsible for keeping peace and order are outdated due to the fact that they were designed according to the realities after the Second World War.

The goal of the course is to highlight these changes, to introduce the main security organizations and to make understand the realities.

The students will have deeper understanding on our today's world and the security environment in which we need to live and our countries need to operate.

SUMMARY OF THE CONTENT OF THE SUBJECT

The students will participate individually and in teams in discussions related to the topics of the classes. The list of topics is not exclusive as the main goal is to analyze recent events. The topics of the lectures and practice are the same each week.

The exact topic and related tasks are subject of change considering that the course intends to cover the most recent events and intends to relate to the individual interests of the students.

However, the content of the course is not subject of change. The students will learn how to use theoretic approaches of security policy in analyzing events and how they can formulate critical opinion on the complexity of today's world.

STUDENT'S TASKS AND PLANNED LEARNING ACTIVITIES:

During the course the students need to fulfill a complex requirement. The tasks need individual and team work and the ability to present ideas in front of the group in oral and in written form. The individual tasks are assigned at the beginning of the course related to the individual interests, needs and career goals of each student.

EVALUATION OF THE SUBJECT:

Evaluation during the course is complex and based on the complex requirements and it is related to the individual interests, needs and career goals of each student. Attendance is a must.

The exact details will be discussed at the first class.

Offered grade can be given: Yes.
